

PRESS CLUB OPENS ITS HANDSOME HOME

President Wilson Among Those Entertained at New Riggs
Building Quarters.

With several hundred invited guests in attendance, the National Press Club celebrated this afternoon and tonight the formal opening of its new quarters on the top floor of the Riggs building. The "housewarming" is the most elaborate event in the history of the famous club of newspaper men, which has in past years staged entertainments of world-wide note.

The visit of the President of the United States, who is a member of the club, and cabinet officials, men prominent in public life, the boards of government and other Washington clubs, and a large number of newspaper men, are the guests of honor.

The afternoon will be marked by a set program, but in the evening, when the club was thrown open to all, the entertainment will be a scene of animation and beauty. Many members will take dinner in the club with their families.

At 6:30 o'clock the Riggs building element will shoot upward with the first of the formal opening celebration.

At 7 o'clock the musical program, interspersed with the orchestral numbers will be vocal and instrumental numbers by soloists. Now and then there will be a speech, shortly after 9 o'clock the building committee, which supervised the construction of the quarters, will formally turn the club house over to the board of governors. This ceremony will mark a new era in newspaper club life, for the large and handsomely furnished rooms now occupied by the club were made necessary by the continued growth of what was once a small and struggling organization. The building committee comprised W. L. Crouse, Harry J. Brown, Oswald Schuttler, J. Fred Essary, and Ben Allen.

The new club rooms, consisting of strikingly appointed assembly room, library, private dining room, grill, card and pool rooms, are considered by the newspaper correspondents and writers to be the most attractive of any downtown club house. They are cozy, tastefully decorated, and alluring in every respect. The walls of the assembly room are covered with the wax "males" of the front pages of the leading newspapers of the United States, this being a unique idea brought over from the old club.

Five years ago today the National Press Club held a housewarming in its then new home at Fifth and D streets. For the past two years these quarters have been small. At large expanse, covered entirely within the club membership, the new home was constructed and is ample to meet the needs of the hundreds of active, associate, and non-active members.

The housewarming program today was arranged by a special committee consisting of Arthur J. Doize, Theodore H. Tiller, William A. Crawford, Frederick J. Haskin, and Earl G. Levin.

Big Musical Program.
The house arrangements are under the supervision of Mr. Crawford, chairman of the house committee, and the musical program was arranged by Mr. Tiller, chairman of the board of governors and of the entertainment committee.

Frank B. Lord, president of the club, will introduce the speakers and officially welcome the President and other noted guests.

The program for "ladies' night," ushered in at 6:30 o'clock, includes the following:
Carmine A. Frabrizio, violin solo; Mrs. Elizabeth S. Maxwell, soprano, accompanied by Miss Katherine Alderman; the Arthur S. Witcomb orchestra in popular and classic numbers; Frank Baptista, saxophone solo; Fritz Mueller, cello solo; Arthur Witcomb, cornet solo; Miss Frances Neilson, character songs; Miss Gretchen Hood, vocal selections; Mrs. Clyde M. Gearhart, whistling specialty, accompanied by G. H. Wilson, piano; two unannounced artists and other numbers. Senator Jim Ham Lewis is expected to make a brief address during the evening.

The officers of the club are: Frank B. Lord, president; J. Fred Essary, vice president; Ashmun N. Brown, treasurer; Donald Craig, financial secretary; C. C. Hart, secretary; Theodore Tiller, chairman; Frank B. Lord, president; J. Fred Essary, vice president; Ashmun N. Brown, treasurer; Donald Craig, financial secretary; C. C. BARRACUDA ARE TAKING THE BAIT

Word comes from Northern anglers who are fishing in the Florida waters that the barracuda, regarded by many fishermen as fully equal to the tarpon as a game fish when light tackle is used, are now taking the anglers' bait.

There is one certainty about the barracuda. He is always found alone. The place to seek the fish is deep channels, for there it lies in wait like a tiger seeking its prey. It is an uncompromising, fierce, voracious, and vindictive. It looks something like the fresh-water pickerel or the muscalonge, and specimens from six to ten feet in length have been caught.

In the West Indian waters it is an amusement of passengers to throw coils of rope to the barracuda. These boys are not averse to going into waters where sharks are present, but when the barracuda comes there is the wildest sort of scramble to get out of the danger zone. There are men in the West Indies who carry scars as the result of battles with the barracuda in its native elements.

In the West Indian waters negroes have a peculiar way of catching this fish. The fisherman stands in his dory and paddles with his back to the sun. The barracuda is a curious fish, and wants to know more about that scar blade. As the barracuda comes close to the surface the fisherman in its eyes gives the fisherman the opportunity of ending the barracuda's life in a way that is not sportmanlike, yet the method comes back "with the bacon."

A consensus of views of anglers who have angled for the barracuda between the southern coast of Brazil and the southern coast of North Carolina say that the barracuda is stealthy, sly, ugly, cunning, morose, savage, rapacious, and wolflike.

Various methods are used for taking the fish. W. H. Gregg, who fishes the Florida waters, prefers a tarpon rod and reel, a 10-0 tarpon hook, a No. 21 line and a wire snood 1½ feet long. He uses no sinker, and keeps the bait, a live mullet, spot or grunt, floating just under or on the surface.
